Good Morning my beloved teacher and friends.

First of all, let's thank God, the Almighty who has been giving us His mercy and blessing. All we can attend this meeting. And also thanks for the chance that has been given to me. Today I would like to present my speech about Drug Abuse.

Drugs are available in all major urban areas, including schools, karaoke lounges, bars, cafes, discotheques, nightclubs, and they even spread into remote villages. Therefore it is not surprising that drug users continue to increase from year to year.

Lots of people are tempted by the excitement or escape that drugs seem to offer. Some used to call drugs harmless recreation. But they're not. Drugs are real and terribly dangerous threat to our neighborhoods, our friends and our families.

A drug is a substance which changes the way the body and mind work. These are the characteristics of drug users:

- Redness of eyes, constant runny nose and teary eyes.
- Sudden mood changes.
- Unusual, unaccountable or irregular behaviour.
- Change of friends.
- Reduction in extracurricular activities.
- Minimal interaction with the family.
- Lethargy.
- Stealing.
- Loss of appetite.
- Nausea.
- Anxiety.

Drug abuse in Indonesia is hidden in a way. It is mainly due to our sense of shame (called ahi) that is instilled among the people. For example, instead of getting help, people will hate their children who are using drugs so they will not have to carry the ahi. It is acknowledged as a problem, but then we are not doing enough to stop it.

Everybody knows that drugs are a problem, everybody knows how bad it is, and yet not many would really come out and make a big step in proclaiming this with a strong message. If we fight this war on drug as a divided nation, then the war is lost. But, if we face this evil as a nation united, this will be nothing but a handful of useless chemicals.

Of course, victory over drugs will take hard work and time, and with your help, WE ARE GOING TO WIN.

Thank you.

Nevertheless, they have been found to increase the effect of other drugs that depress the central nervous system, including alcohol, antihistamines, barbiturates, narcotics, sedatives, and tranquilizers. Two of the main types of antidepressants are Elavil and tofranil. Anti-anxiety tranquilizers are drugs that have a calming effect on the central nervous system, relieve anxiety and tension, and sometimes relax the skeletal muscles. The drugs have been shown to have undesirable side effects and to be habit-forming. Tranquilizers are especially dangerous as they intensify the effects of other depressants; tranquilizers can cause coma and even death. Librium and Valium are two examples of anti-anxiety tranquilizers that produce effects like alcohol. Barbiturates are often abused. Anti-psychotic tranquilizers are a major classification of drugs commonly used to treat serious psychiatric problems. The drugs, such as Thorazine, are rarely used non-medically, because they do not produce euphoric effects. Still, the drugs are sometimes preferred to barbiturates as calming agents because they do not cause physical dependence and even in large doses do not result in coma. Cannabis is a general word used to refer to preparation such as hashish, hash oil, and marijuana that are consumed for their intoxicating effects. The intensity of the reactions depends on such factors as the potency of the drugs, the mood and expectation of the user, and the user's tolerance. Now write a short essay on drug abuse in 300 words. Drug Abuse Essay 300 Words Drug abuse is something that ruins one's life and leads to great grief and misery. Drug abuse implies the use of drugs in a way that harms the body of an individual. If drugs are taken beyond the subscribed limit, they negatively affect the body and pose a great threat to life. It leads to serious mental and physical deterioration. Drug abuse not only affects the individual who is a victim to it but also destroys and tears apart their family and love life. People who are victims of drug abuse also suffer from financial loss as they do not have the potential to do any kind of work and thus it leads to unemployment and greater family issues. There are numerous reasons behind drug abuse, let's take an insight into the things that lead to drug abuse - Many parents nowadays do not focus on their children as they are much busy earning their livelihood. However, the children feel ignorant and thus start using drugs at an increased level which makes them addicted to it and ultimately make them drug addicts. So parents need to supervise their children so as to avoid such situations. Then comes lack of communication, teenagers and their parents are unable to talk to each other over certain issues due to age gap and thus teenagers seek advice from other people who may convince them to take a drug overdose. So it's high time that parents should become friends to their children and listen to their problems patiently. There are various risks associated with drug use. This not only affects the health of the user but also ruins his family life. His relationship with friends and society starts deteriorating day by day and this leads to depression and anxiety problems. Sometimes, this drug abuse proves to be fatal for many people and ultimately destroys one's life completely. Certain ill effects of drug abuse include drug addiction, accidents, mental illness, heart problems, and much more. So a person suffering from the consequences of drug abuse must go through a multifaceted treatment that proves to be effective and helps them come out of this deadly situation. Know More Corruption Essay Two little things can be such a big factor in our lives. Drug abuse and child abuse affects a child's or teen's life not only at the time of drug abuse and or child abuse but for the rest of their lives. The list of the dangers of drugs goes on and on. Drugs not only affect the child's or teen's school work, their body, mind, or their future but also people that surround them such as their friends and families. Drugs aren't the only threat to our youth. Stranger Danger is affecting daily life of children and teens in even the smallest of towns or the best neighborhoods, but its not only strangers that are creating these horrible acts of child abduction and sexual abuse. Sometimes it can be someone that the child is very close with or have known your whole life but it can also be someone they have meet on the internet, this can be more harmful than anything. Drugs may not affect their school work the first time or second time, but time plays a big factor with drugs. In time grades will slip, maybe even get different friends or a new group, and a totally different attitude. But in the beginning there might not be any signs at all. They may not immediately notice the impact that their drug taking is having on their school work, but...show more content...Its illegal to give prescription drugs to people who don't have a prescriptions. Taking prescription drugs for nonmedical use to get high or "self medicate" can be just as dangerous and addictive as taking illegal street drugs. According to the office of National Drug Control Policy, the rise of prescription drug abuse among teenagers is reaching alarming levels across our country(7). 2009 National Survey on Drug Use and Health( NSDUH) by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration revealed that nearly one-third of people ages 12 and over who tried drugs for the first time began by using prescription drug non "Dangers of Drug Abuse" is a timely warning to the modern society about the impacts of substance abuse written by Dr Hardin B Jones. Excitement over what drugs can do to prevent and reverse ailments both physical and psychic has led to the increasing cases of drug abuse. It is a misunderstanding that psychiatric drugs can make one feel better if he already feels good. When people become dependent on drugs to solve their problems, they lose the capacity to deal with life's situations through perseverance, self-discipline, and mental effort.From Hippocrates, the father of medicine himself we get the idea that a remedy must take into account the entire person, not just the symptom. He also states that a healthy person cannot benefit from taking a drug and sometimes it can even be counterproductive.The brain governs sensations, moods, thoughts and actions by a series of complex chemical processes. Pleasure and satisfaction are a result of such chemical processes. These are easily upset by sensual drugs used with the intention of activating the pleasure centers. The craving for the drug continues leading to addiction, but he gets less and less satisfaction. The brain loses the capacity to interpret the stimulation as pleasurable. So the artificially induced pleasure is not repeatable. But the naturally attained pleasure and satisfaction can be repeated indefinitely.An addict feels sensory deprivation, physical discomfort and personality changes. He fails to respond to the environment and other people. He experiences paranoia and draws further and further into himself. He sees everyone with suspicion. In extreme cases they have to reassure themselves that they are alive. Harmful side effects are not apparent until it is too late. It leads to degeneration of health and brain function. Drug abuse can affect other organs like liver, kidneys and lungs. Drugs can also cause cell damage. A drug addict is susceptible to other diseases, malnutrition weight loss, respiratory diseases, cardiac failure and even death due to overdose. Drugs can cause temporary or permanent damage to the brain's intricate system of communication. The damage to the brain is the most subtle, most unrecognized and least understood consequence of drug abuse. Page 2 The use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs during adolescence and early adulthood remains a serious health problem in the United States. Among the drug classes, alcohol is the most frequently used substance by adolescents and that is followed by marijuana and tobacco. The consequences of alcohol and drug abuse are critical on both a personal and social level. For the developing young adult drug and alcohol abuse threatens motivation, hinders the cognitive processes, increases the risk of accidental injury or death, and contributes to debilitating mood disorders. In addition, it contributes to educational failure, juvenile crime, increase in mental health services, and high cost in health care. Oftentimes, there are underlying mental health issues that are undiagnosed or existing conditions that are medicated which can invariably lead to an increase in adolescent alcohol and substance use disorder. There are a myriad of cultural and societal risk factors that contribute adolescent alcohol and drug use. A risk factor is defined as "any attribute, characteristic or exposure of an individual that increases the likelihood of developing a disease or injury". These risk factors can be identified through family history of substance use disorder, sense of inferiority, pleasure seeking, low self-esteem, unemployment, poor social support, desire to experiment and poor social support (Thomas, N. L., Naregal, P. M., Mohite, V. R., Tata, S. H., Karale, R. B., & Kakade, S. V. (2015)). Risk of drug abuse increases greatly during times of transition, such as changing schools, moving, or divorce. Additional peer risk factors include gang involvement or the reinforcement of negative norms and expectations within peer group, the lack of academic... middle of paper ...se disorder is growing more every day and can have serious consequences not only for the user but also the family and friends and innocent bystanders. They can range from legal consequences or more severe such as acquiring an STD, overdose, or death. Just like adults, adolescents can become dependent and give up important responsibilities and activities. The more risk factors they are exposed to more likely they are to have access to drug/s of choice. Fortunately, there are many treatment and prevention methods they are employed to help decrease initiation of a particular substance or to help those who are impacted by this disease. There are several adolescents with a substance use disorder who also have one or more psychiatrist disorders, whether from use or prior to drug use. This aspect will be important to the diagnosis and treatment of substance use disorders.
